WOULDN'T YOU.

I'd like to stray through forest aisles,
When Nature wears her sweetest smiles
And gentle zephyrs all the woodland blossoms softly woo;
There when wild birds trill their lays
And brooklets loiter on their ways,
I'd like to pick a little sprig of heart'sease.

Wouldn't you?

I'd like to steal through meadows fair,
When clover blossoms scent the air,
And wander through grass-grown paths,
disturbing dew;
I'd like to hide in tangled dolls,
And listen to the fairy bells,
And bathe my wearied spirit in the music.

Wouldn't you?

Yes, I would leave the flurry,
The unbending toil and hurry,
Of prisoned, wall-bound cities; I would go where skies are blue,
I'd quite forget the grinding mart,
And lying close to Nature's heart,
I'd steal her sweetest, peace-begetting secrets.

Wouldn't you?

When gorgeous flowers, bloom-showing,
In the sunny South are growing,
When the browning leaves of autumn shade the spot where violets grew,
I'd bid farewell to sorrow,
And with gladness hail the morrow,
If you could be with me, I'd be happy.

Wouldn't you?

second, all being of the "coon" variety. "Phoebe Thompson's Cake Walk" is in the prevailing style of that class of music, bright and taking. A sacred composition, "I Heard the Voices of Angels," is masterly in arrangement, classical in style, and well adapted for Easter services.
